

Dennis Hesselning joined ACER as Head of the Gas Department on December 1, 2012.

Before joining the Agency, he worked for the Netherlands Competition Authority NMa from 2002 to 2012. There, he worked as Head of Unit in the Competition Department from 2006 onwards, responsible for merger control and antitrust enforcement in the Dutch energy, telecommunications and media sectors. Before 2006, he worked in the Energy Regulation department, with a focus on gas. Next to his work for the NMa, Dennis trained energy regulators and competition authorities in the Ukraine, Rumania, Bulgaria, Turkey and Vietnam. He is also a guest lecturer on energy regulation and competition law enforcement at the Florence School of Regulation and at Utrecht University.

From 2000 to 2002 Dennis worked as a management consultant for McKinsey & Company in Brussels, providing strategic and operational advice to postal companies and banks.

Dennis holds a PhD in Mathematics from Utrecht University, the Netherlands.
